

Ten Reasons Why You Should Sign up for the AMBS January Interterm Course in Guatemala

1. It's inexpensive for a quality three-week theological education experience in a 2/3rds world setting.
2. The course is designed as a multi-dimensional learning experience, not just a book-oriented one.
3. SEMILLA, which will host the course, is an Anabaptist-Mennonite seminary, something not easily found outside of North America.
4. This January's course, Peace and Justice: Latin American Perspectives, meets an ethics elective requirement for the M.Div. program and counts as a "course in the concentration" for the M.A. theology/ethics and the M.A. Peace Studies programs. With some modification, it call also meet a theology elective requirement for the M.Div. program.
5. AMBS tuition aid and matching grants can be applied toward this off-campus study opportunity.
6. This special course makes it possible to study in a Spanish speaking culture without knowing Spanish.
7. You will learn with and from peers who accompany you in a more intensive way than at AMBS.
8. While Elkhart is buried in January ice and snow, the weather will be spring-like in Guatemala.
9. You can help Guatemalan craftspeople by buying some of their famous weavings.
10. You can experience all of this in the delightful company of Ted (and maybe even Gayle Gerber) Koontz! 😊 😊

And if those aren't reason enough—consider the fact that you don't need malaria shots to study in Guatemala City.

Contact Ted Koontz [tkoontz@ambs.edu] to indicate interest or to ask questions.